New year had begun. The school reopened after the Winter break. As informed earlier and having been consented from the parents, it was a day of vaccination for classes Mont1, Mont 2, Class I to IX.

For good health free from diseases, our school along with NTPC had initiated the DPT vaccination. A team of doctors and Medical faculty had come to school for the proceedings. Proper hygiene was maintained with the usage of disposable syringes. Though painful, parents were content to see their kids secured from the dreadful diseases.

Assembly by Class II

As a regular practice of conducting the Class Assemblies, this month it was the turn of class II to present the assembly. The theme of the assembly being 'Basant Panchami Celebration'. It was wonderful to watch the tiny kids performing. The Assembly began with explaining the terms - Basant & Panchami, followed by the NEWS reading. The significance of the festival was conveyed through speech and a skit adorned with music and dance.

INTER HOUSE ACTIVITIES

An Inter-house Drama competition was organised for the classes I - IX. Divided into 2 categories, the theme for class I - V was 'A Fable from Panchatantra', and for Class VI - IX being 'A Drama by Famous Dramatist'.

The students from different Houses had performed extremely well. The judges were startled to see the hand-made props and the way of presentation.

#Annual Athletic Meet

The atmosphere was filled with energy, enthusiasm, zeal and a competitive spirit. The students were on cloud nine, as it was the Annual Sports Day 2019-20. The ginormous event was celebrated for three days. The students rejoiced at the races conducted for them. Even the energetic parents showed their enthusiasm by actively participating in the games arranged for them. The winners were applauded with the medals on the same day.

Montessori observed the fest on 22 January. Classes I - V acknowledged the event on 23 January and the Classes VI-IX on 24 January.

TED
TALK

As it is customary in our school, every month TED Talks on various topics by the teachers are being presented. This day Sri Tirtha Angadi, PRT Science accorded the talk on the topic 'Never Give up.' The talk began with talking to the students about the requisites for achieving the goal. The students participated actively and learned the attitude of never giving up in their long run achievements. The Principal concluded the assembly by taking a quick review and advising them to develop strong determination and Never to give up.

A workshop is initiated by PMI tied up with RamaKrishna Mission for the development of the students towards the responsible citizens. The schools who could avail this training were Navodaya schools, Kendriya Vidyalaya, NTPC schools, etc.

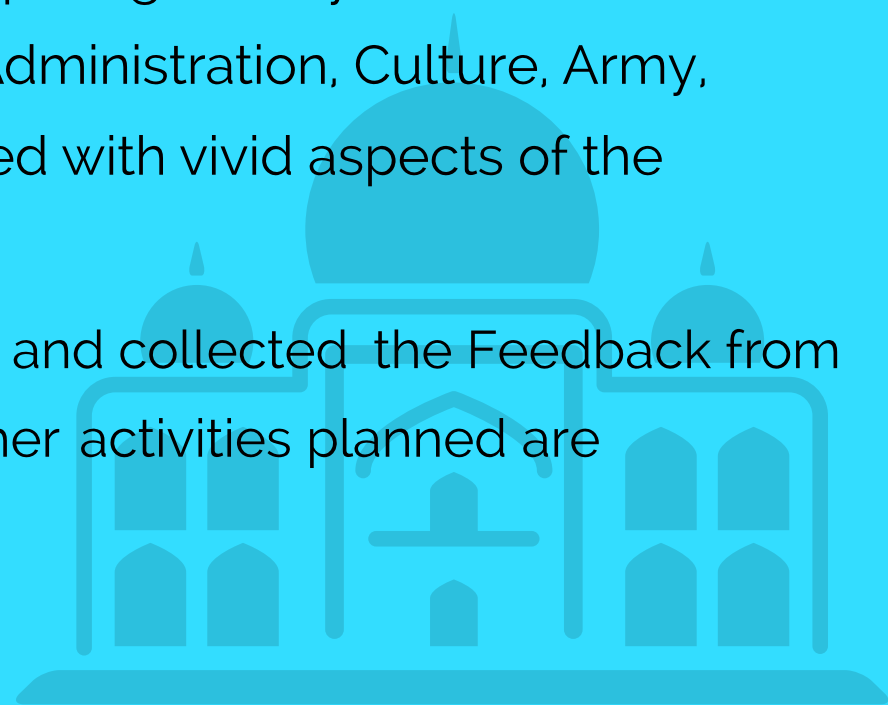

To guide the students in the right direction, this Academic year the workshop for teachers was conducted in the month of August. From our school, this opportunity was given to Mrs. Sridevi Mural. After the workshop, she had been training the students of class VII every week.

To observe the ongoing training process, Mr. Sharath Pujari, a Resource person from Mysore had visited our school. He was impressed with the student's response to his questions and appreciated the training process.

An educational tour for class VI students to Golgumbaz, Vijayapur was organised. 24 students along with 2 teachers had visited the city with Historical heritage. Reaching at 10.30, the students enjoyed the massive site and the 'Whispering Gallery'. Then the presentation was rendered on the topics of Architecture, Administration, Culture, Army, Genealogy of Adilshahi Dynasty. The students were enriched with vivid aspects of the Dynasty.

In the form of Chat show, they have shared their knowledge and collected the Feedback from visitors. The educational tour will be preserved and the further activities planned are presentation in the form of a tableau & report.

AN ESSAY ON ZERO WATER DAY

It was a holiday that day – the middle of the summer vacation. It was a Sunday too, so everyone was at home (we are a family of four). I woke up, at 8:50 a.m., to my mother shouting at me to get up.

She was telling me to take a clean up quickly. With a cold rush of dread, I realized that today was the day they were cleaning the water tanks. I tore to the bathroom but alas, I was too late – my brother shut the door in my face. And there I stood, still half-asleep so not intelligent enough to realize that we have a separate sink which I could find solace in until my brother came out. I only realized this when my mother rather angrily pointed. So I, once again ran (I ran a lot that day for no particular reason or profit). But I was doomed again to wait, for let me remind you, it was Sunday. There stood my father, in front of the mirror with white foam thick enough to be a very convincing Santa beard. But you see, my father is very understanding a one of the many things we have in common is being scared of Mum when she is angry. And she was very much near the boiling point then. So when I asked Pops to scoot over so I could brush my teeth, he did. So I got that done and even managed to wash my face, but my brother was yet to come out of the shower. It was already 9:25 and they were going to cut off the water supply at 10:15. Both I and Pops were still to shower. We weren't going to make it, at least one of us wouldn't.

I was actively thinking of creative to strangle my brother for being such a nuisance and it seems God heard my wishes, for the bathroom door creaked open just that moment. Brother dearest sauntered out, having not even the slightest idea of the panic he was causing. He flashed a charming smile our way in lieu of greeting but was pushed aside in our stampede towards the bathroom. My father as understanding as he is, he hates not being able to take a bath. He gave me an apologetic look before slipping into the bathroom, my gaze following him under a mist of hurtful betrayal. By the time he came out, Mum had already glowered at me three more times and it was already 9:45. There was still a little hope left but I was working against the clock. the chances of me making it it out clean were not non-existent, but thin.

Good news everyone, I made it out. By 10:10 a.m., I had sat down for breakfast and Mum had calmed down. The rest of the day wasn't as brutal as the morning – we had made sure to fill up a few buckets the previous day. We, however, had to exercise great caution over our usage of water for should we use up the elixir too quickly we would wither and perish during the day. I wondered if this was what some people faced everyday – people who live in deplorable conditions in the slums or areas facing water shortage as severe as that of Cape Town. I felt guilty for having used water so leisurely before. From that day on I made sure no water was wasted. I am still going strong on that vow, doing good for the world – are you?

CREATIVE CORNER

HOW I MOTIVATED MY FRIEND FOR WATER

POEM

*In these modern days
I hear every day say
It seems there are hundreds of ways
To save money, time and hay?*

*The fact that the earth more than quarter
Is filled with life-giving water
But its published as the charter
Which shows alarming parter*

*I shared with my friend
That so much we do lend
To this precious earth which needs to be mend
She disagreed, hence I had to comprehend*

*Without the notion of worries
And the false depict and flurries
Wherein every living creature will have scurries
In this modern age of all hurries*

*I really sometimes wonder
Why do people ponder?
For the things that are yonder
And often neglect those are fonder*

*One day with my pal
I was enjoying in a huge mall
When dawned on me a call
My aim in life is very tall*

*After my several, innumerable requests
She could finally apprehend my quest
Each drop of water has to be used at its best
So that kindred of unizen can rest*

*Now, its high time to give a threat
Another day wasted, human kind will have to regret
Or else all have to migrate
And the living world will hide under secret*

*After listening to my pleading lecture
My bestie got motivated & pledged to begin a culture
Of spreading the water conservation tincture
And in unison to forever keep ignited this venture*
